Government have reviewed the policy to be followed in permitting Government servants to prosecute higher studies out-side office hours. While Government servants need not be prevented from acquiring higher qualification it is equally necessary to ensure that they do so without detriment to their work.

In supersession of the earlier orders cited above, Government are pleased to direct that Government servants desirous of attending colleges or institutions with a view to acquiring knowledge and higher education should obtain prior permission of the authority competent to appoint them and that such permission should not be granted unless they satisfy the following conditions:—

- (i) that their study will not adversely affect their work and in particular the hours of study will permit them to adhere to the normal office hours; and
- (ii) that they have passed the departmental examinations prescribed for the post.

Failure to comply with the above orders will be viewed seriously.

2. The above orders will not however, be applicable to Government servants prosecuting studies without attending colleges or institutions and appearing for examinations as external students, for which no permission is necessary.
